

PARTNERSHIP LEARNING TEACHING SCHOOL ALLIANCE

Teaching Grammar Effectively in

Primary Classrooms

Delivered by:

David Reedy

National College for Teaching & Leadership

This course is for:

Primary class teachers and English Subject Leaders

The session will include:

A rationale for the teaching of grammar

A brief review of research evidence

Practical examples covering both KS1 and 2 which demonstrate how to embed high-quality contextualised grammar teaching and learning into the reading and writing process

How still and moving image, as well as written texts can be the starting points and contexts for developing children's understanding of language structure and how to apply in their own writing

An overview of the grammar requirements in the new National Curriculum and how schools can take a whole school approach to this area

The session will draw on David's book, co-authored by Eve Bearne; 'Teaching Grammar Effectively in the Primary School' (UKLA 2013), which gives a comprehensive insight into how to teach grammar successfully in context, including teaching strategies and case studies.

Participants are asked to bring with them a text that they will be using in their year group as the basis of English lessons in the near future for a planning activity.

Course Presenter

David Reedy has had an extensive career in primary education, including as a teacher, UKLA President and General Secretary, as well as currently being a Co-Director for the Cambridge Primary Review Trust and, until very recently, Principal Primary Adviser in the London Borough of Barking and Dagenham.
